Ohio Bell and Ameritech support Maya exhibition

Ohio Bell and Ameritech, two leaders in communications, are pleased to help bring the exhibition, "The Blood of Kings: A New Interpretation of Maya Art," to The Cleveland Museum of Art. This world-class exhibition provides unique opportunities for the public as well as scholars to view, study and enjoy the art and communication of an ancient civilization.

Ohio Bell and the other members of the Ameritech family of companies are the leading providers of telecommunications services in the Great Lakes region. They are committed to supporting social, economic and cultural activities that help fulfill societal needs. "The Blood of Kings" exhibition demonstrates both the cultural and economic contributions the renowned Cleveland Museum of Art makes to the region.

The exhibition also underscores the importance of communications, not only to an ancient civilization but also in today's Information Age.
